DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Applicant's election without traverse of the species of Group Ia, the layer of Group I and Geometry I in the reply filed on August 12, 2005 is acknowledged.

Claims 13, 17, 19, 20, 29, 33, 35 and 36 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected species, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Claim 19 has also been withdrawn since it is drawn to the dome geometry. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on August 12, 2005.

Information Disclosure Statement

The information disclosure statements (IDS) submitted on July 6, 2004; February 18, 2005; April 29, 2005; June 10, 2005; and October 13, 2005 have been considered by the examiner.

Claim Objections

Claim 27 is objected to because of the following informalities: The term --functional-- (line 3) is misspelled. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-3, 7-12, 14, 21-25, 27, 28, 30 and 37-44 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bergman et al. (US 5624427) in view of Dubowik (US 4870725).

Bergman et al. (figures 1a, 8-10) teaches generally sinusoidal elastically stretchable fastener material for a garment wherein non-woven fastener material 54 is within the depressions formed by the layer 53. The fastener material is extendable so that the separation of the peaks and depressions decreases as the material is stretched. The difference is that the fastener material is on the peaks as well as in the depressions. However, Dubowik (figures 2-17) teaches that there is an advantage in lessening the exposure of fastener material by removing it from the elevated regions because it provides for enhanced selective engagement and inherent lessening of the opportunity of undesired engagement. As improved selective engagement can be an important and beneficial feature for the fastener of Bergman et al., it would have been obvious to remove the fastener material from the elevated regions in view of Dubowik teaching that it is desirable to have the fastener material in regions that are depressed so as to have improved selective engagement and inherent lessening of the opportunity of undesired engagement. The particular amount of extension is a matter of picking a value between the extremes shown by Bergman et al. and Dubowik wherein the fastener either extends outward to form an elevated region in one orientation as shown by Dubowik or approaches the mid-plane but has no disclosure of extending beyond the midplane as shown by Bergman et al.

Claims 4, 5 and 26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bergman et al. (US 5624427) in view of Dubowik (US 4870725) as applied to claims 1 and 21 above, and further in view of Schmitt (US 5779691).

Further modification of the fastener of Bergman et al. such that the fastener has a reinforcing elastic layer would have been obvious in view of Schmitt (figure 1) which teaches applying an elastic reinforcing layer 32 to a pleated member so as to reinforce its elastic qualities as being a desirable function.

Allowable Subject Matter

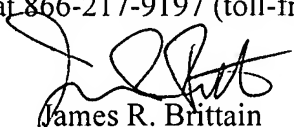

Claims 6, 15, 16, 18, 31, 32 and 34 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
